Survivors of the Haiti earthquake, their rescuers and the ensuing chaos resemble that of the end of the world, according to a Calgarian who experienced the aftermath of the Indonesia tsunami.

Daniel Clayton, president of local security company Diligence, said the mass destruction leaves many people with thoughts of the apocalypse, surrounded by dead bodies and no help in sight.

"The first thing you notice, before anything else, is the overpowering smell of death and decaying bodies. It overtakes you as soon as you breathe the air," he said, likening his experience in Indonesia with that of the situation communicated to him by his team in Haiti.

Calgary, Alex Ruiz of Calix Media and former Calgary sportswriter Angela MacIsaac have joined forces to organize YYC4Haiti Jan. 28 at Flames Central at 5:30 p.m.

- Visit the group's Facebook page for more information.

Clayton's team, helping with security efforts to prevent looting in the capital of Port-au-Prince, said they are experiencing much of the same chaos as Indonesia, but worse in terms of violence and looting.

"The next 12 to 24 hours are critical. The supplies and aid should be approaching and it's likely (our team) will be ambushed by people in desperation and shock."

Despite the arrival of relief, the massive aid effort can't save everyone, Clayton said.

"It's inevitable that every time a natural disaster happens, some of those (they are) going to help will succumb to death, dehydration or disease. It's inevitable," he said.

But he also adds, the looting and desperation of survivors is another concern.

"The looting has caused major problems. Looters are being killed in the streets and they predict the problem will only get worse in the coming days."

B.C. teens on way home from Haiti

Haiti Crisis

RESCUE Seventeen

Kootenay, B.C. teenagers who survived the deadly earthquake in Haiti are expected back on Canadian soil today after being rescued by the military. They were to be flown to Montreal last night.

"I'm just incredibly relieved," said Joyce Ouellet, whose 17-year-old son Blake was stranded with his high school classmates in rural Haiti, where they had planned on helping build a goat farm.

"I can't wait to see him. It was horrible at first, not knowing where they were ... how they were feeling, what they were going through."

Ouellet said Blake called once while she and her husband were out of the house, and he spoke to his older brother.

"He said Blake is very shaken up. He's been through a rough ride but he can't wait to get home. I can't believe, looking at some of the pictures, that not one of them was hurt. I'm so thankful no one was hurt or killed."

The students had landed in Port-au-Prince four hours before the earthquake hit, and spent the next five days sleeping in a field outside the Mission where they were supposed to be volunteering.

"I think these kids will have a lot to remember and they've grown up — they've become adults. It's changed them forever," said Ouellet.

Every year, Boston Pizza encourages Calgarians to donate $1 for a paper heart until Valentine's Day for the Boston Pizza Foundation, but this year the drive is especially close to the hearts of the employees at the 17th Avenue SW Calgary location.

COMMUNITY Welcome to a neighbourhood where entertainment is free.

That's the slogan Calgarian David Olivares wants to live by as he tries to make neighbourhoods about the people and promote community spirit by involving residents with their communities.

Citizens can visit myneighborhoods.ca to find other people with the same interests and to add input about the events they'd like to see in their part of town.

"I just realized it costs so much to go out to do things and try to have fun, but really, there is a lot of fun things people can do in their communities for free," Olivares said.

Olivares is working with the Somerset-Bridlewood communities as a starting point and plans to offer free Latin dancing classes and sports to start, but hopes to spread the idea.

"But I think everyone is excited and we want to get into more communities and promote community spirit," he said.

Olivares said the website will help create funds through advertising and as a platform for citizens to see what's going on in the neighbourhood.

Burning question for torchbearer

The Olympic flame wasn't the only thing lighting up southern Alberta this weekend — the flames of love were also burning bright. Yesterday morning, torchbearer Ivana Zecevic had just finished her leg of the torch relay in Medicine Hat, when her boyfriend Matt Chabluk appeared wearing a T-shirt that said: "Ivana will you marry me?" "She said yes," said Chabluk. "She waited a long time, seven years."

Evacuees tell of devastation

Haiti Crisis

Wrapped in blankets and with the stress of their traumatic experience etched on their faces, another group of Canadian evacuees from Haiti arrived in Montreal late Saturday.

The roughly 200 weary evacuees arrived at Trudeau Airport aboard a military plane and an Air Canada jet, before being ferried to a nearby hotel where anxious but relieved friends and relatives waited to embrace them.

Some quake survivors were put in wheelchairs and taken to waiting ambulances, while others recalled the terrible events of the past few days in trembling voices.

A Canadian evacuee is taken from the Wyndham Hotel in Montreal by paramedics yesterday after being evacuated from Haiti.

"It was horrible," said Marie Jennot, who was in Port-au-Prince visiting family when the earthquake struck Tuesday. "There were things I have never seen before, that I never imagined I would see.

"There is no way to communicate, there are no telephones, no drinkable water, no electricity."

Panel cut controversy in new citizenship guide

REVIEW Dozens of significant changes were made to Canada's new citizenship guide before its splashy debut last November, some apparently to dampen controversy.

An internal summary of edits proposed by a group of distinguished Canadians suggests the process was partly driven by the politics of language, religion and ethnicity.

The blue-ribbon panel grappled, for example, with the touchy issues of Indian residential schools, Quebec's heritage, the historic role of Acadians, and relations between church and state.

Ukrainian vote likely headed to run-off

Disillusioned Ukrainian voters gave the archenemy of the 2004 Orange Revolution a first-place finish in the initial round of presidential voting yesterday, setting up a showdown with the heroine of the Orange movement, an exit poll showed. The survey predicts the pro-Russian opposition leader Viktor Yanukovich will finish first in the hard-fought contest and Prime Minister Yulia Tymoshenko, left, will finish second, clearing the path for a run-off between the pair sometime next month. Survivors await aid in Haiti

Looters plague Port-au-Prince, bodies burned in street

Haiti Crisis

Drumbeats called the faithful to a Sunday Mass praising God amid a scene resembling the Apocalypse — a collapsed cathedral in a city cloaked with the smell of death, where aid is slow to reach survivors and rescue crews battle to pry an ever-smaller number from the ruins.

As worshippers met for their first Sunday services since the 7.0-magnitude quake, many Haitians were still waiting for food and water and some took vengeance against looters.

Haitians seemed increasingly frustrated by a seemingly invisible government — some setting bonfires in a downtown street to burn the bodies authorities have been unable to remove.

Rescue workers, too, were exasperated by the struggle to get aid through the small, damaged and clogged airport run by U.S. military controllers, and to get it from there into town.

But there were also occasions of joy: An American team pulled a woman alive from a collapsed university building where she had been trapped for 97 hours; three survivors were rescued from deep in the pancaked ruins of a supermarket; and a woman was pulled alive, dehydrated but otherwise uninjured, from the ruins of a hotel.

Othman, who has also been ordered suspended from writing, spoke from Taiz, south of the capital. Her employer, Jamal Amer of Al-Wasat weekly, was fined 10,000 riyals ($50). He said the verdict was cruel and illegal.

Obama asks Bush, Clinton to head quake relief fund effort

Haiti Crisis

HAITI Many consider George W. Bush's mishandling of relief efforts following the August 2005 hurricane Katrina as the moment when Americans turned on him.

And yet now the former U.S. president is spearheading efforts along with Bill Clinton to raise funds for the victims of the Haitian earthquake.

U.S. President Barack Obama announced on Saturday the 42nd and 43rd presidents of the United States would lead a bipartisan effort to raise private funds for Haitian relief.

The two men — who became friends during Bush's presidency, said Bush — appeared together on a number of Sunday morning talk shows following re-taped White House interviews a day earlier.

But as is usually the case in the U.S., even natural disasters are quickly politicized.

One of the most popular conservative commentators in the United States, Rush Limbaugh, is refusing to back down from his accusation that Obama is trying to score political points from the Haiti earthquake.

Pope shooter to test for military service

The gunman who wounded Pope John Paul II will be forcibly taken to a military facility to assess his fitness for military service when he is released after nearly 30 years in prison, his lawyer said yesterday.

Mehmet Ali Agca, 52, is due to be released from a prison near Ankara on Monday. A military hospital in 2006 had ruled he was not fit for the obligatory military service due to a "severe anti-social personality disorder" but authorities said that report has never been approved and is not valid, lawyer Haci Ali Ozhan said.

Ozhan yesterday did not comment on details of that report but there are long-standing questions about Agca's mental health based on his frequent outbursts and claims that he was the Messiah.

Agca has said that he will answer questions about the attack after he is released from prison.

Little is known about what led Agca to shoot at the pope while he was greeting the faithful in St. Peter's Square on May 13, 1981, but he has said that foreign powers had conspired to have the Polish-born pontiff killed.

When Agca was arrested minutes after the attack, he declared he had acted alone. Later, he suggested Bulgaria and the Soviet Union's KGB were behind the attack, but then backed off that line.

His contradictory statements have frustrated prosecutors over the decades.

Ozhan yesterday expressed concern about Agca's security. He said he had formally objected to the decision to take Agca to a military facility and possibly to a military hospital for medical examinations, arguing the 2006 report was valid.

Israeli minister sent to UAE for first time

DIPLOMACY Israel for the first time sent a cabinet minister to the United Arab Emirates, a small Gulf country with which it doesn't have relations, to attend a conference on alternative energy.

Uzi Landau

National Infrastructure Minister Uzi Landau told The Associated Press yesterday he did not meet with any Emirati officials while attending a conference of the International Renewable Energy Agency (IRENA), based in the UAE capital Abu Dhabi. The agency's activities are open to Israel because it is a member state.

Landau said the Israeli delegation entered the country after "special arrangements" were made. "They had to do it since they committed themselves to making it possible for all member states, with or without relations, to participate in the agency's activities," Landau said in a phone interview from Abu Dhabi.

Does Big Brother improve safety?

InTransit

Adrienne Beattie

metronews.ca/intransit

Take a walk in the city or ride public transit and you can expect to be caught on camera. Gradually, we're trading off our privacy for the sense of security provided by surveillance cameras, but according to a report out Friday, it's a false sense of security.

The report, published by Queen's University's Surveillance Camera Awareness Network, suggests that despite the rapid growth of surveillance, "there is little or no evidence that surveillance deters crime." The report adds to a growing body of evidence that surveillance measures don't work.

That hasn't prevented increased monitoring measures in our city though. Calgary Transit has more than 300 video cameras monitoring LRT stations. The city's Traffic Information System has more than 50 cameras at intersections. The city also has a number of cameras in crime hot spots, mostly in the downtown core and East Village.

I don't feel any safer. According to Alberta's privacy commissioner, Frank Work, my feelings are justified. He argues the cameras don't prevent crime but instead displace it. He also says since most crimes take place at night, it's often too dark for authorities to identify suspects. His main concern is that cameras give a false sense of security.

In San Francisco, a recent study revealed cameras have had little effect on violent crime. Homicides decreased within 76 metres of the cameras, but killings rose between 76 and 152 metres away. There was no change in other violent crimes rates.

Similar results were found in the United Kingdom, where the London Metropolitan Police found less than one crime a year is solved for every 1,000 closed-circuit cameras. Outdated and poorly maintained cameras also reduce the effectiveness of surveillance according to Leo Knight, a former Calgary police officer who runs Paladin Security.

A surveillance expert at Carleton University said cameras are often installed after high-profile crimes.

Solid evidence should govern whether surveillance measures are used, not emotional responses following highly publicized crimes. Public dollars and forgoing our rights to privacy is too high a price to pay for ineffective crime control.

Adrienne Beattie is a Calgary-born writer who has covered urban issues since 2001 and has an English degree from the University of Calgary.

Today, tips on how to create the perfect romantic partnership. Or, Personal Relationships and Standards of Behaviour: Is it possible to have both?

Recently, my partner Liz and I decided to have some work done to our basement wall. Before making this decision, we had this conversation:

Liz: We need to have the wall fixed.

Me: The wall is fine.

Liz: It's leaking.

Me: Think of it as a "water feature."

Liz: There's fungus growing. (This was actually true)

Me: Organic mushrooms. We'll start a home business.

Liz: Look, either we get it fixed now, or we look forward to putting "indoor pool" on the listing when we sell this place.

Me: (Prepared to tackle the problem immediately ... or three weeks later when the first thaw set in.) OK.

When it comes to the concrete (this is a pun, of course) issues of life, Liz and I have different ideas of what is acceptable. Liz sets the bar high. Me ... not so much.

The fact is, Liz and I are a perfect example of the old adage, "Opposites attract ... right up to the point that you try to choose paint colours for the living room."

So, what's the best way to deal with differences in standards?

One method is the "My partner has to change — now" approach. There is a term for people who favour this method. "Divorced."

Method No. 2 is to follow this easy-to-use system.

1. Identify where your personal bar is set. My friend Marlene has what she calls a "standards scale."

Marlene: I expect an 80 per cent standard of performance from my staff, 70 per cent from my husband, 95 per cent from my car and so on.

Me: You expect more from your car than your spouse?

Marlene: I drive a BMW. 2. Identify where your partner's bar is set.

Generally, this will be "As far away from mine as possible and how can anyone live that way, anyway?"

3. Accept that you're stuck with this.

Because, in the end, what I've learned from being with Liz is this: Great relationships are like a dry basement. They just don't happen without a little work.

Eco-village promotes green lifestyle

London's BedZED returning to zero carbon roots by bringing a biomass power plant online

CELIA PEDROSO
Metro World News

The innovative BedZED (Beddington Zero Energy Development) in southern London was designed to be zero carbon.

Solar panels and wind cows, plus the intelligent design, changes the energy performance of the homes. Overall, energy use in the units is reduced by 70 per cent compared to other homes built in 2002. In addition, 20 per cent of electricity used on site is produced by the photovoltaic panels, which convert light from the sun.

"When the new biomass plant is running, which should be next year, BedZED will be zero carbon once again, like when the old one was working," says Sue Riddlestone, executive director of BioRegional, an entrepreneurial charity with solutions for sustainable living.

This English eco-village

Just over 250 people live in the BedZED community was designed by architect Bill Dunster and developed by Peabody Trust and BioRegional.

"We have houses, offices and businesses where we developed a sustainable lifestyle," Dunster said.

Besides energy saving, people try to buy food from local producers and to use public transportation.

After seven years, a lot of people who moved initially are still living there and new people have moved in.

"Even with large families, they are using the car club, a car-sharing system through the internet," explains Riddlestone.

Houses to rent or buy come regularly to the market and the price is the same as the average in the region.

"You save a lot in your energy and water bill and get a bigger sense of com-healthier, happier lifestyle," she sums up.

BioRegional was established with the aim of taking an entrepreneurial approach to bringing local sustainability into the mainstream of our everyday lives.

BioRegional Development Group focuses on research, education and building working examples of how sustainable products and services can be made economically viable and easier for people to adopt.

Where opportunities to bring further environmental benefit have existed, the charity has been able to establish related businesses which have grown out of the work of the charity. Each BioRegional business is structured to reflect the needs of the industry and the stakeholders. Charity trustees are not able to have commercial interests in the BioRegional businesses, retaining charity independence.

Greening up your diapers

ROMINA MCGUINNESS

PRODUCTS "My wife, Kim, discovered the diapers at an exposition in Australia. We loved the idea so much we decided to re-brand them abroad," explains John Graham-Nye about GDiapers, the latest green accessory to hit the baby market.

"We re-branded and exported the idea to the States. We didn't want the name to be too green — 'GDiapers' could stand for anything; green, global googoo, gaga, genuine...Great Britain. As soon as you're stamped 'green' you limit your customer base. With the letter G, even people who aren't 'green' will buy them as they're fashionable."

The diaper is made from a two-part system. The outer pant is made from cotton and elastane, the inner pant from a biodegradable liner made from tree fluff pulp and super absorber. The first shocking fact about normal diapers is that that they can take up to 500 years to — GDiapers take 50 to 150.

Secondly, in North America, diapers are the third biggest contributor to landfills, up to 25 million a year, a ridiculous statistic considering they are used for a maximum of two to three hours.

In four years GDiapers estimates it has saved somewhere around 30 million diapers.

Going Green Tips

FLIGHTS Cancel that flight. One round-trip flight across the country creates two to three tonnes of CO2 emissions per passenger. In those ten hours, you'll cancel out the effect of every single energy-saving device you've installed in your home. In fact, if you fly on that round-trip flight it will spew out more carbon emissions than the average Toronto home's electricity use over an entire year.

OFFSETS If you have to fly, buy carbon offsets. The projects introduce green electricity elsewhere and plant carbon-dioxide sucking trees that offset costs (myclimate.org).

Earnings to drive TSX

No gains in sight as expectations remain high

Gains can be elusive on the Toronto stock market after investor enthusiasm was dampened last week by soft earnings reports, tepid economic data and moves by China to curb bank lending.

"Right now, the good news is priced into the financial markets," said Paul Vaillancourt, director of asset allocation at Franklin Templeton Managed Investment Solutions.

"In the weeks ahead it's going to be a bit of a see-saw type market because the good news was baked in and any negative surprise causes some profit taking."

In the absence of market-moving economic data coming out this week, earnings will set the pace for trading. And earnings reports are more of a tough sell than they were over the past year because expectations are so much higher.

"I guess revenue of course is a key theme for the quarter," said Patricia Croft, chief economist at RBC Global management.

"It's all about revenues so I think there's much more people going through this with a fine tooth comb, as opposed to thank goodness they're actually reporting earnings."

The major economic news of the week is the Bank of Canada's interest rate announcement tomorrow.

Analysts say the announcement likely won't affect the equity markets since the central bank has widely telegraphed it has no intention of raising rates from near zero until at least the middle of the year.

Protesters clash with police officers during a protest in Hong Kong Saturday, after a controversial plan to link Hong Kong to China's high-speed rail network won approval from local lawmakers.

Rail-link plan sparks protests

HONG KONG A controversial $8.6-billion plan to link Hong Kong to China's national high-speed rail network won approval from local lawmakers Saturday, leading to scuffles between police and protesters opposed to the project.

The measure to build the railroad to connect Hong Kong to the mainland system passed the Chinese territory's legislature 31-21, according to the government.

The project has run into heavy opposition and triggered protests in recent weeks because of concerns it will displace many residents and cause major traffic congestion and other environmental problems.

Opponents also question the economic benefits touted by the government and say authorities are forcing through a massively expensive project without enough public scrutiny.

Hong Kong officials, however, say most of the public supports a project they say will offer a big economic boost to the territory.

More signs of trouble for Euro

CURRENCY The euro is in a rough spot. And it could be there for years.

The economic and financial crisis has ballooned budget deficits in Greece, Ireland and several other member countries — exposing one of the underlying vulnerabilities of Europe's decade-old experiment in a multinational currency.

While few think the 16-country currency zone will actually break up, holding it together through the unfolding debt crisis will mean painful, unpopular measures such as budget cutbacks and higher taxes.

Daniel Gros, director of the Centre for European Policy Studies in Brussels, foresees "lean years ahead and there is very little that European leaders can do about it."

Jean-Claude Trichet, the head of the European Central Bank, faced several questions at his monthly press conference last week about the possible breakup of the euro. He brusquely dismissed them: "I do not comment myself on absurd hypotheses."

XM revenues jump 10%

EARNINGS Satellite radio provider XM Canada said a growing subscriber base fuelled revenue growth of 10 per cent and helped reduce the company's net loss in the first quarter of 2010.

The Toronto-based company, which is owned by Canadian Satellite Radio Holdings Inc., said Thursday revenue grew to $13.7 million in the quarter ended Nov. 30, up from $12.5 million in the year-earlier period.

The company said the period marked its 17th consecutive quarter of revenue growth, thanks in part to a 19 per cent increase in subscribers to 391,000 from 329,000.

Its operating loss decreased 66 per cent to $1 million, compared with a loss of $2.9 million last year.

Bobby Ryan scored the go-ahead goal with 7:17 left and the Anaheim Ducks overcame Calgary's three breakaway goals for a 5-4 victory last night, extending their home winning streak against the Flames to 11 games.

Troy Bodie got his first NHL goal, Dan Sexton connected on a power play, and Evgeny Artyukhin also scored for the Ducks. Jonas Hiller finished with 33 saves after his teammates left him defenceless on the breakaway goals by Olli Jokinen, Mark Giordano and Curtis Glencross. Hiller was coming off a 4-0 loss to the Kings on Thursday night in which he gave up three goals on 13 shots and was benched in the second period.

Jamie Lundmark also scored for Calgary, and Curtis McElhinney made 21 saves. The Flames haven't won at Honda Center since Jan. 19, 2004. They have only one win in

The Flames, who were beaten 1-0 on Friday night by Nashville for their first shutout loss of the season, scored more than three goals for only the second time in their last 23 games. They had no more than two in 16 of those contests, but won four of them. The Flames had scored only six goals over their previous four games despite outshooting their opponents 146-90.

Flames captain Jarome Iginla has played eight consecutive games without a goal, equalling his longest drought since a 10-game stretch from Jan. 8-Feb. 4, 2008.

N.Y. win sets up Jets, Colts matchup

NFL The New York Jets can expect to see Peyton Manning for four quarters this time.

With a 17-14 upset of the San Diego Chargers yesterday, brash coach Rex Ryan and his hard-hitting Jets earned a surprise spot in the AFC title game at top-seeded Indianapolis.

The Week 16 rematch is one of two conference championship games Sunday featuring some of the NFL's top quarterbacks, all within one win of the Super Bowl.

m.metronews.ca

First, Manning gets another shot at the Jets, who handed Indianapolis its first loss of the season — rallying after the four-time MVP and other Colts starters were pulled early in the second half to rest. "A matchup that probably nobody wanted, but too bad," Ryan said. "Here we come!"

Then, 40-year-old Brett Favre and the Minnesota Vikings visit Drew Brees and the New Orleans Saints for the NFC title.

"I know we're not done yet," Favre said after throwing four touchdown passes yesterday in a 34-3 rout of Dallas. "The New Orleans Saints, they're explosive."

'The eagles don't fly anymore'

Tougher IOC standards likely mean end to loveable losers competing in Games

From Eddie the Eagle and the Jamaican bobsled team to a Mexican cross-country skier who moved so slowly that race officials sent out a search party to find him, the last Winter Olympics held on Canadian soil provided no shortage of lovable losers to cheer for.

And for many, the lasting images of the 1988 Calgary Games aren't those of Canadian silver-medallist Elizabeth Manley or three-time Finnish ski-jump champion Matti Nykkanen, but of the underdogs who made it all the way to the Olympics despite their seeming absence of athletic ability.

Former Olympian Michael (Eddie the Eagle) Edwards

But while such average Joe performances tend to be crowd-pleasers, next month's Vancouver-Whistler Winter Games will feature little of the like, says an Olympic historian. "I think the IOC took the

Underdogs from the '88 Olympics

• Mexico's Roberto Alvarez entered the 50-kilometre cross-country ski race although he had never travelled more than 20 kilometres on snow. Race officials, fearing he was lost, sent out a search party to find him.

• The Jamaican bobsled team suffered a spectacular crash during the four-man event, but won the hearts of many when members carried their sled across the finish line.

position that it takes away from the real athletes, the ones who succeed," said David Wallechinsky, co-author of The Complete Book of the Winter Olympics: The Vancouver 2010 Winter Edition.

After the 1988 Games, the International Olympic Committee instituted what's popularly known as the "Eddie the Eagle rule."

The rule requires athletes who want to compete in the Games to place among the top 50 competitors in international events or in the top 30 per cent.

The Eagle, whose real name is Michael Edwards, became a folk hero during the Calgary Games for his infectious smile and personality, despite the fact he finished far behind his closest ski-jump competitor.

Edwards, who had been jumping for just two years when he became the first British man to compete in the sport at the Games, lamented the tightened restrictions during an interview with The Canadian Press late last year.

"It was a bit ironic — I became so popular in Calgary because I was exemplifying that Olympic spirit and then I got banned because of it," he said.

The IOC has been unapologetic when it comes to giving the spotlight back to those who win events, as opposed to those who lose them in an entertaining manner.

During a news conference last month, IOC president Jacques Rogge was asked if there would be an Edwina the Eagle in Vancouver after women's ski jumpers were denied the chance to compete in the 2010 Games.

Quipped Rogge: "I think in the Olympic Games the eagles don't fly anymore."

MEDAL HOPES Canada's figure-skating team for Vancouver might be short on experience, but it is long on results.

And the Vancouver-bound skaters believe that youth won't be a factor when they carry Canada's lofty hopes into the Pacific Coliseum next month in one of the Winter Olympics' most high-profile events.

Patrick Chan, who's barely 19, along with ice dancers Tessa Virtue, 20, and Scott Moir, 22, and 24-year-old Joannie Rochette, will lead the charge to the podium in a sport that Canada has won a medal in in every Games going back to 1984.

"It's younger, but I think this team is especially strong because we've got a chance of a medal in every discipline," said Rochette, one of the relative elders among the group.

Only four of the 12 athletes — Rochette, Jessica Dube and partner Bryce Davison, and Anabelle Langlois — have any Olympic experience.

But they've already shone on one the sport's biggest stage — all of the Canadian champions are world medallists.

Canada has two entries in each of the four disciplines in Vancouver. The Canadian silver medallists that are also Olympic-bound are Cynthia Phaneuf and Vaughn Chipeur in women's and men's singles, Vanessa Crone and Paul Poirier in dance, and Anabelle Langlois and Cody Hay in pairs.

The battle for a berth in Vancouver brought out the best in Canada's top skaters at the Labatt Centre in London, Ont., Rochette roaring back from a frustrating season to lay down arguably her finest skate yet in the long program.

Chan recorded a whopping overall score of 268.02 points to win the gold in London. THE CANADIAN PRESS

"Just a second, I'm going to turn off the oven." It's a typical workday for Jenny Koniuk — she's in the middle of testing a batch of recipes for a national magazine.

While many of us follow recipes on a regular basis, Koniuk, 53, gets paid to cook from them for her family, and the food is included.

Early on, Koniuk loved to cook and read cookbooks and food magazines. Her entire family had a sweet tooth, so there was lots of demand for her cookies and brownies and her mother's amazing pies.

Toronto-born Koniuk studied English literature at the University of Western Ontario, and began working in publishing. She stopped to have three kids.

Twelve years ago, a friend of hers became editor of a grocery store food magazine.

She came in the door one day while Koniuk was making sushi and asked her to test recipes for the magazine.

Her very first recipe, a pie, was a disaster. She made it three times, but it just wouldn't work. Eventually, the recipe developer realized he'd made a fundamental measurement error. As the years passed, Koniuk got more contacts in the food industry and now tests recipes for magazine such as Today's Parent, Chate-laine and Homemakers. She also develops recipes and does product development for a grocery store chain. Testing makes up about a quarter of her workweek.

When she tests, she starts by sitting down with a cup of tea and reading the recipe in close detail. Koniuk sometimes uses a technique a col-

Why Your World Is About To Get A Whole Lot Smaller

Author: Jeff Rubin

Publisher: Random House Canada

Price: $29.95

How would you feel about filling up your car at $2 a litre?

With consumers balking at anything higher than $1, I doubt many would be able to afford to drive a small to midsize vehicle ... let alone an SUV. According to Jeff Rubin, CIBC World Markets former Chief Economist, oil is about to create a lot of upset in our current global economy. Rubin states that the abundance of cheap oil in the world has created a market that is over reliant on the affordability of it. Everything made in China, Atlantic Salmon, and even locally your oversized house in the suburbs, will become luxury items, or more like normal items with an insane price tag.

Rubin points out that while we may be pumping more oil out of the ground, we have not been able to discover new oil deposits at the rate we are depleting those we already pump from. So although this means that globalism as we know it will no longer be able to thrive as it currently does, we can expect a rebirth of the local economy where our labour costs are now competitive to the cost of manufacturing and shipping from China. As Rubin puts it; "don't be surprised if the new smaller world that emerges isn't a lot more liveable and enjoyable than the one we are about to leave behind."

Blockbuster Avatar takes the Globe

James Cameron's space fantasy Avatar won the Golden Globe for best drama last night, while the Vegas bachelor bash The Hangover won for best musical or comedy.

The Canadian-born Cameron also won for best director.

Avatar is following in the footsteps of his Titanic as a box-office record-breaker and awards darling.

The win for The Hangover, a huge audience favourite, brought uncharacteristic awards attention for broad comedy, a genre that often gets overlooked at Hollywood honours.

"I just want to thank my mom, who supported my decision to become a director when she realized I wasn't as smart as my two sisters," said Hangover director Todd Phillips.

Among acting winners were Sandra Bullock as a football mom in the football tale The Blind Side, Robert Downey Jr. in the crime romp Sherlock Holmes, Meryl Streep as chef Julia Child in Julie & Julia, Mo'Nique as a loathsome, abusive welfare mother in Precious and Christoph Waltz as a gleefully bloodthirsty Nazi in Inglourious Basterds.

Cameron had kind words for ex-wife Kathryn Bigelow, nominated as best director for The Hurt Locker.

"Frankly, I thought

Kathryn was going to get this. She richly deserves it," said Cameron, whose Titanic earned the directing and best-drama Globes 12 years ago on its way to Academy Awards triumph.

mated film.

While Streep is a perennial at awards shows, the prize marked a dramatic turning point for Mo'Nique, who was mainly known for lowbrow comedy but startled audiences with her ferocious performance in Precious: Based on the Novel Push By Sapphire.

"First let me say, thank you, God, for this amazing ride that you're allowing me to go on," the tearful Mo'Nique told the crowd.

Waltz, a veteran Austrian actor who is a relative newcomer in Hollywood, won the supporting-actor Globe as a gleefully bloodthirsty Nazi in Quentin Tarantino's Inglourious Basterds.

Jason Reitman and Sheldon Turner won the screenplay honour for Up in the Air, which Reitman also directed. The foreign-language honour went to The White Ribbon, a stark drama of guilt and suspicion set in a German town on the eve of the First World War.

Mad Men won for best TV drama, while Michael C. Hall won for best actor in a TV drama for Dexter, in which he plays a serial killer with a code of ethics, killing only other murderers.

Dexter also won the supporting-actor TV honour for John Lithgow. Other TV winners included Juliana Margulies as best actress in a drama for The Good Wife and Toni Collette as best comedy actress for The United States of Tara.

The rain-drenched red carpet was a rare sight for an awards show in sunny southern California, stars in their finery getting damp under umbrellas as storms swept the region.

The Globes got a makeover, featuring Ricky Gervais as master of ceremonies, the first time in 15 years the show had a host.

A look at Boleyn's demise

The Lady in the Tower

Author: Alison Weir
Publisher: McClelland & Stewart
Price: $34.99 (Hardcover)

BRITISH HISTORY writer Alison Weir maintains her focus on royalty of the past in The Lady in the Tower: The Fall of Anne Boleyn. The book reflects on the tragic side of Anne Boleyn's life, documenting the events that lead to her demise. Using a carefully researched evidence, Weir presents two perspectives on the former Queen of England's arrest: Henry VIII's desire for a successor, and a court conspiracy. Complete with colour photographs, and genealogical tables, the book recalls a disputed, defining period in the history of England.

The Price of Malice

Author: Archer Mayor
Publisher: Minotaur Books
Price: $31.99 (Hardcover)

VERMONT DEPUTY-CUM-AUTHOR Archer Mayor's 20th novel in the Joe Gunther detective series traces the roots and bloody consequences of two mysterious New England crimes. Vermont Bureau of Investigation's token investigator Joe Gunther is back, probing the messy homicide of a suspected pedophile with ties to a trailer park family. But Joe becomes distracted from his duty when he discovers new evidence about the believed disappearance at sea of his girlfriend Lyn's father and brother. Talk of murder is in the air, and if Joe and Lyn aren't careful, it could reach them too.

No Time to Wave Goodbye

Author: Jacquelyn Mitchard
Publisher: Random House
Price: $29.95 (Hardcover)

ABDUCTION SURROUNDS the characters in Jacquelyn Mitchard's No Time to Wave Goodbye, a novel that revisits the family she introduced in 1996's The Deep End of the Ocean. Beth Cappadora never quite recovered after her son Ben was abducted at three-years-old, just to return at 12. Now in his mid-20s, Ben has a daughter of his own and sets out with sister Kerry to help their brother Vincent make a documentary about child abduction. The film takes off, but the family's celebration is cut short when Ben's daughter disappears and past horrors resurface.

Where's Woods-o?

HINT: IT'S A LONG WORD The ever-elusive Tiger Woods has been said to be holed up everywhere from Arizona to South Africa. Now the latest rumour has all of Hattiesburg abuzz. Several Web sites claim that the embattled golf great is undergoing rehabilitation for sexual addiction at a respected clinic in the southern Mississippi town, people.com reports.

While officials at the Pine Grove Behavioral Health and Addiction Services clinic won't say whether Woods is a patient, two local TV stations, WJTV and WLBT, report that their sources confirm Woods was there.

In the university town of 45,000, "there are very few secrets," says WJTV reporter Chris Williams. But there aren't any certain answers, either. "I can't either confirm or deny I have seen him here," said Chip Gibson, director at Southeast Aviation at the Hattiesburg airport.

"But, I can tell you that my telephone is ringing off the hook with news people wanting to know if I know anything."

The clinic is considered one of the top facilities in the U.S. for the treatment of sex addiction.

People also caught up with Gentle Path Clinical Director Deborah Schiller, who would neither confirm nor deny Woods's presence at the facility.

"We deal with patients who have suffered some trauma in their lives," she said. "Our concern is to help them heal and recover."

Murphy's mom clears it up

SHE HAD A BROKEN HEART In their first interview since her death in December, the mother and widow of actress Brittany Murphy tell People that they believe she died because of a congenital heart murmur.

"She had a little bit of a cold," says Murphy's mother Sharon of the days leading up to the actress' death.

"You could never in a billion years imagine this happening."

Despite rumours that have swirled since her passing, both Sharon Murphy and Brittany's husband, Simon Monjack, say the 32-year-old did not suffer from mental illness, use drugs or have an eating disorder.

"Do you not think anybody would have picked up on this anorexic, mentally deranged person?" Monjack tells People. "It's ludicrous."

Both say Murphy's heart condition was diagnosed in her teens and that she had been given appropriate medical care. "We had it checked out every which way you could imagine," says Monjack.

Murphy's mother says her daughter's naturally "bubbly" personality may have sparked rumours of drug use. "She never even drank. Maybe a glass of champagne at New Year's," says Sharon.

Time to pay up, Mr. Cage

IT'S THE TAXMAN CALLING Nicolas Cage has one expensive resolution for 2010: To get the IRS off his back.

"Over the course of my career I have paid at least $70 million US in taxes. Unfortunately, due to a recent legal situation, another approximate $14 million is owed to the IRS," Cage says in a statement to People magazine.

"However, I am under new business management and am happy to say that I am current for 2009. All taxes will be paid, including any to-be-

Metro Recipe of the Day

Potato and Camembert Bake

INGREDIENTS:

1 1/2 lb (750 g) pre-washed baby new potatoes
4 bacon slices
4 scallions, sliced
1/2 round of Camembert cheese, 1/2 lb (250 g)
1/2 cup (125 mL) 10% cream

METHOD:

1. Preheat oven to 440°F (230°C). Cook potatoes in pot of boiling water 12-15 minutes or until tender. Drain thoroughly and tip into greased, shallow ovenproof dish.
2. While potatoes are cooking, snip bacon into thin strips using kitchen scissors. Put into cold, nonstick frying pan and cook over high heat until crispy. Remove from pan with slotted spoon. Mix scallions with cooked bacon.

3. Cut half-round of cheese in half horizontally to make two semicircles. Score rind in criss-cross pattern to help cheese to melt.

4. Scatter bacon and onions over potatoes. Season with ground black pepper, then pour over cream. Set cheese on top, rind side uppermost, then bake 7-10 minutes or until melting and bubbling. Serve piping hot.

Avoiding your RSPs?

$10,000 says we can change that.

Introducing The $10,000 RSP Giveaway*

Right now, getting a Second Opinion from a Scotia® advisor can help get your retirement plan back on track. And then some.

From now until February 28th 2010, you'll also have a chance to win $10,000 to top up your RSP.

Your Scotia advisor will find ways to make your regular RSP contribution work its hardest, with the right blend of investments for you. And the sooner you come in to speak with us, the more chances you'll have to win in our weekly draws.

* The $10,000 RSP Giveaway (the "Contest") commences at 12:00 a.m. (ET) on January 18, 2010 and ends at 11:59 p.m. (ET) on February 28, 2010. No purchase is necessary. The Contest is open to all legal residents of Canada who have reached the age of majority in their province of residence at the time of entry, except employees of The Bank of Nova Scotia and Carlson Marketing (and persons domiciled with them and immediate relatives). There will be 12 prizes awarded, each consisting of a Registered Retirement Savings Plan (RSP) contribution of ten thousand dollars ($10,000.00 CAD) to each winner's Scotia RSP. The chances of winning depend on the total number of eligible entries received during the Contest period. Answering of a skill testing question is required to be officially declared a winner. For full contest details go to scotiabank.com/rspgiveaway. ® You're richer than you think, Scotiabank Group, Scotiabank, ScotiaMcLeod, and Scotia Private Client Group are trademarks of The Bank of Nova Scotia, used with permission.
